

What students say about the Graduate Diploma of Orientation and Mobility

“One of the real strengths of the course was the amount of time devoted to practical work; not only did that really embed O&M skills and methods of teaching but also gave us first hand experience of the effects of glare and different vision conditions so that when I talk with clients about this I can see that they understand that I’m coming from an authentic place.”

“After completing my final placement I do feel confident to apply for a position as an O&M. I am confident that I have been well prepared to practice and further add to my skill base”

“I think the course was fabulous; it certainly prepared me to start as the sole O&M practitioner in a rural team feeling that I had the skills to get on top of a big wait list, and deliver competent services”

“I started work feeling well supported with substantial connections already made with other O&Ms and knowing there was a network with a huge body of knowledge that I could tap into if needed”
